POULTONS PORTABLES EMPLOYEES PRESENTED WITH CERTIFICATES

Four employees at Poultons Portables (Dorset) Ltd have been presented with certificates after completing their qualification in Performing Manufacturing Engineering and one employee completing an NVQ Level 3 in Management Studies. The five employees, who started their NVQ's in February 2009, were presented with their certificates by Edwin Sadd, Managing Director of Poultons.

Yeovil College received a referral from Business Link to contact Poultons Portables to discuss the possibility of delivering some training in the workplace. After discussions with Edwin it was decided that the PMO was the preferred course for the employees with one employee undertaking the Management course with funding from Train to Gain.

All of the employees have now successfully completed the course and gained life skills and a good working knowledge of Health & Safety. They have become very aware of health and safety in their working areas and their responsibilities towards good housekeeping and the running of each department. They have created recycling schemes saving the company money on a monthly basis. They have also applied safe systems of work through their written work and applied these in the workplace as good working practices which benefits the company and keeps production at the correct level of output.

Edwin Sadd, Managing Director commented:

“The training has given the employees more confidence in their work. They are now able to resolve their own problems rather than asking for help. They have a greater understanding of instructions.”

Ritchie Scammells, NVQ Assessor for Yeovil College said;

“The employees have been a pleasure to teach and assess during this qualification and have always been very polite and courteous when we have visited to deliver the programme throughout the year. They have enjoyed the course and have shown interest in perusing other qualifications in the future with Yeovil College.”
