COLLEGE POSTPONES FULL-TIME INFORMATION EVENING

Following recent bad weather and predictions for more snow later this week, Yeovil College has decided to postpone its forthcoming Full-time Information Evening until Thursday 28th January 2010.

The event is an opportunity for year 9, 10 and 11 students to visit the College with family and friends and find out how it can help them fulfil their potential.

Director of 14–19 Curriculum, Andy Perlejewski, said "It was a difficult decision for the College to make, but with more severe weather conditions predicted for this week, it seemed the sensible thing to do. The safety of visitors, staff and current students is paramount and we wouldn't want anyone risking their safety to come and see us. Visiting the College and speaking to staff and current students is really the best way to find out about us, our courses and the advantages we can offer students, so we look forward to welcoming more visitors on Thursday 28th January 2010."

A full complement of staff will be on hand on the new date to provide information about the wide range of courses available, including A Levels, Vocational qualifications, Apprenticeships and the 14-19 Diplomas.

In addition, advice on other important topics, such as finance, travel and student support, will be on offer from specialist staff.

Potential students will also get a taste of courses by taking part in activities available throughout the evening.

Campus tours including visits to the Learning Centre, Leonardo Building and other key sites, will also be available.
